[1] Morocco is currently experiencing a massive historical transformation as it prepares to co-host the 2030 FIFA World Cup alongside Spain and Portugal. Since the official announcement, the kingdom has launched several mega-projects to modernise its infrastructure. Many rural and urban areas are undergoing major changes, creating thousands of jobs for Moroccan youth. "This is not just a sports event; it is a golden opportunity to boost our national economy and show our cultural heritage to the world," an official report stated.

[2] The country's investment in sports infrastructure began to accelerate between 2024 and 2026. Like many ambitious developing nations, Morocco is using this event to overcome economic obstacles. The journey from traditional stadiums to building world-class eco-friendly arenas is a result of immense financial investments and hard work. "We always thought of hosting a World Cup, which we used to dream about for decades. It was a big dream," said a local sports analyst. The biggest inspiration for this modern development came from Morocco's historic semi-final achievement in the 2022 Qatar World Cup.

[3] The 2030 World Cup preparation is known for its contribution and support to sustainable transportation in Morocco. "Our goal is to support green mobility. We suffered from traffic and old transport systems in major cities. Now, we can provide high-speed electric trains, eco-friendly buses, and modern airport terminals," a minister said. In late 2025, the government allocated a huge budget to expand the TGV high-speed train network to Marrakech and Agadir. It also gives regular financial support to local companies to implement digital ticket services.

[4] Morocco earns substantial revenues from international tourism and foreign investments, making it one of the top business hubs in Africa. However, recently, there was one photo on social media in which construction workers were eating a very simple traditional Tajin outside the massive Grand Stadium of Casablanca. Many internet users asked why they didn't eat in restaurants. Others responded that this is a proof of how modest and proud Moroccan workers are of their national project.

[5] Throughout this preparation phase, Morocco participated in different international sports forums in Paris, Madrid, and Lisbon. Because of its great strategic location, the country managed to dominate the Mediterranean sports investment scene. Morocco has received many regional awards for its outstanding stadium designs. In 2025, the Grand Stadium of Benslimane project was celebrated internationally. The Moroccan World Cup model serves as a role model for many developing nations in Africa and the Mediterranean.
